Part 3: Translation

Translate the following passage into Urdu.

Prince Charles' visit to Pakistan in November 2006 was a very important event, especially for him. For the many years he has been waiting to become king, it has been difficult for him to find a suitable role in life, though he has many interests. He helps young people in difficulty make the most of their lives. He takes a great interest in ways of farming that produce food without using artificial methods. He has set up organisations in the UK where companies can donate their surplus goods to charities, helping to avoid unnecessary waste. In recent years he has become better known as a supporter of equal rights for the followers of all the different faiths in Britain.

On many occasions, he has tried to bring together religious leaders of all faiths so they can discuss matters which affect them, such as racism, injustice, education and employment. He has worked hard to promote understanding between the communities. In my opinion he should be praised for doing so, whatever the British media might say or write about him. Even though the British media love to criticise him, he still has many devoted supporters. [20]
