When in Palermo, Buenos Aires

Palermo

Palermo is one of Buenos Aires's largest neighbourhoods, famous above all for its parks and museums, but it is also full of shops and cafés, and rich in examples of the lifestyle of the local residents. The area has a relaxed atmosphere and it is easy to walk around, with lots for you to see and hear. The paintings of local artists are laid out on the pavements, and the air is full of all kinds of music made by street bands and singers.

Museum of Natural Science

The Museum contains a huge collection of exhibits showing the early history and past cultures of the country. Above all, you must look out for the elaborate ladies' headdresses worn in earlier centuries and also for the fossils of the ancestors of giant armadillos.

Serrano Avenue

This street is home to the famous Craft Fair and Flea Market, both wonderful places to shop. They are filled with leather, knitted and other handmade goods, and you will enjoy simply looking around at all the colourful displays. If you do find something to buy, you can always bargain for a good price.

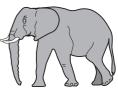

Plaza de Mayo

This square is surrounded by grand apartment buildings. In this area, the architecture of government buildings is a mixture of nineteenth century Parisian and traditional South American styles. The broad avenues are lined with tropical palm trees, and fountains pour showers of water into ornamental pools in the centre of the square.

Zoo and Botanical Gardens

The city zoo is home to a great variety of species of animals. You will certainly enjoy seeing the elephants in their enclosure. They are continually on the move in and out of their most unusual house, built in the shape of an ancient temple.

Many domesticated cats have been abandoned by their owners in the Botanical Gardens. However, groups of volunteers are on hand daily to ensure that the cats are all well fed and looked after.

Constitution Station

The main railway station lies at the southern edge of the district. From here, you can take a train to the beaches of the nearby coastline or travel inland into the rich and fertile countryside. For less than ten dollars you can go anywhere for a day trip.

Eating Out

The variety of food found in Palermo is overwhelming. Restaurants serving delicious international dishes can be found on almost every street corner. Many of them specialise in Italian cooking and provide reasonably priced meals to suit everybody's taste.

www.papaCambridge.com Read the following article about a working holiday in a country park, and then answer the que on the opposite page.

Work, Rest and PLAY

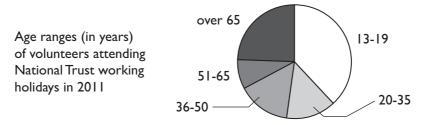

William Derbyshire had always regarded the phrase "working holiday" as a contradiction in terms. He thought that holidays were for relaxing, not working. But when he heard about working holidays run by the National Trust, he wondered if he should find out more.

So he obtained a brochure and discovered that the National Trust organises hundreds of working holidays in some of the most beautiful places in the UK. The Trust provides cheap accommodation and food, and as William was short of money at the time, he reckoned that this could be a way for him to take a break without having to spend too much.

William chose to go to a big country park, to help a group of other volunteers to clear some of the surrounding woodland. He was met there by the group leader, who immediately told him he had already made his first mistake. The trainers William was wearing were quite unsuitable for outdoor work. It says so in the brochure, in bold type, but somehow he had missed that detail. Luckily, the leader had a pair of smart green boots for him to borrow. Then they headed off into the forest to meet the other volunteers.

The forest was full of all kinds of trees but had become overgrown with thick bushes and tangled weeds. The volunteers' task was to clear these, to give the trees more room, and to plant a few more in the empty spaces. The National Trust is a charity and receives no money from the government. Without the help of volunteers, work like this would not be done.

The other volunteers had been there for a week, and they had already cleared an area the size of several tennis courts. The volunteers ranged from teenagers to pensioners, from a retired postman to several students working for an award. There was also a surveyor, a civil servant, a teacher and a chef. A few were first-timers, but most of them had been on lots of these holidays before.

After volunteers have done several working holidays, they get the chance to go on a brief training course and become a volunteer leader. In exchange for a few extra duties, such as driving the minibus and buying the food, leaders receive their holiday completely free. However, even though it was a cheap way to spend a week, it was clear that most of them were there just for the love of it. They enjoyed meeting new people and doing useful work together. Although they did not boast about it, William could tell they were keen to play their part in making their corner of the world a better place.

The leader cut down some bushes with a chainsaw and then showed William how to use an axe to do the same work. William found the task hard, but he liked the fact that he was free to work at his own pace. As on any holiday, it was good to make new friends. Clearing woodland is not the only thing you can do on a National Trust working holiday. Activities range from gardening to archaeology, picking fruit and vegetables, looking after farm animals or cataloguing books in the library of a historic house.

William had his meals in a cabin with the other volunteers and slept in the men's dormitory. He did not sleep too well because the room was cold. Nevertheless, he loved every other aspect of the holiday and would be happy to go back again next year.

www.papaCambridge.com At the age of 17, Rubina Afzal will soon be starting her final year at the Beaconsfield A located at 40-44 Murree Road, Rawalpindi, Pakistan. Rubina lives with her family at 67 A Avenue, in the city of Islamabad, the capital city of the country, where her father is a senior official the Ministry of Finance.

Throughout her time at school, Rubina has always had an outstanding academic record. Next year she will be taking her "A" levels, and it is predicted that she will achieve A grades in English, French and Economics and a B in History. She recently won the Cambridge International Schools' competition by writing an essay on the economic history of Pakistan since 1947.

Rubina would like to go to the UK for her higher education. The other day, she heard that the Churchill Foundation was offering five scholarships to school students from Pakistan to enable them to take first degree courses at universities in the UK. The scholarship would cover all the fees for up to four academic years of study, plus a generous contribution towards the cost of accommodation. Rubina has decided to apply for this scholarship. If her application is successful, her father has promised to pay for her return travel to her destination, and her school Principal, Mrs Shaheen Talaat, will give her a generous gift of money for books, as well as providing her academic reference.

Rubina would like to study Development Economics. Her intention is either to follow her father into the Pakistan Government service or else to join an international aid agency such as The Islamic Development Bank. Although she would have liked to go to Oxford or Cambridge, she has decided to apply to the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS) in the University of London. This institution offers her preferred course and allows her to specialise in the economies of South Asian countries.

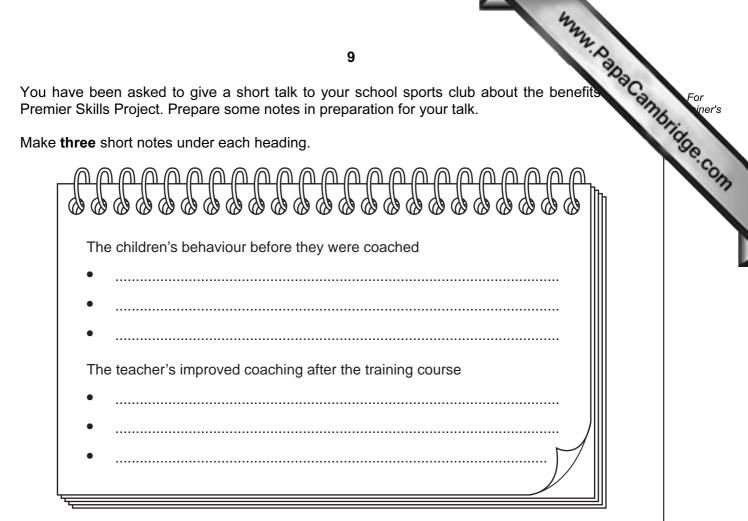

Rubina has decided to apply for a scholarship, in the hope that SOAS will accept her for a place on the course that she wants to follow. She also has an uncle, Dr Aftab Saleemi, living near London. He is a lecturer at Reading University and has agreed to give her a character reference.

Imagine you are Rubina. Fill in the application form on the opposite page, using the information above.

Exercise 5

Imagine you have given your talk to the school sports club. Your Principal has asked you to produce a written summary to be sent to all the other schools in the area.

Look at your notes in Exercise 4. Using the ideas in your notes, write a summary about the benefits of the Premier Skills Project.

Your summary should be no more than 70 words. You should use your own words as far as possible.

[Total: 4]

You have just finished four weeks of paid work during your last school holiday.

Write a letter to a friend in which you describe the job and say what you did.

In your letter you should:

- give details of where you worked and what you did; •
- explain who gave you the job and why;
- describe what you learnt from the experience. •

Either of the pictures above may give you some ideas, but you are free to use any ideas of your own.

Your letter should be between 100 and 150 words long. Do not write an address.

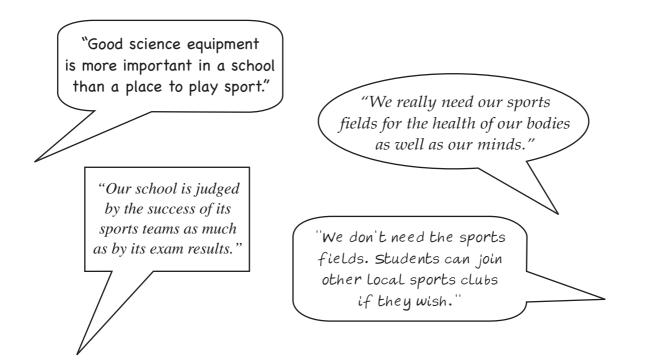

You will receive up to 5 marks for the content of your letter, and up to 5 marks for the style and accuracy of your language.

www.papaCambridge.com Your school needs to buy expensive new equipment for the science laboratories. The Principal proposes to sell the school sports fields to raise the money for this.

Here are some comments from other students:

Write an article for your school magazine giving your views about the issue.

Your article should be between 100 and 150 words long.

The comments above may give you some ideas, but you are free to use any ideas of your own.

You will receive up to 5 marks for the content of your article, and up to 5 marks for the style and accuracy of your language.
